Abstract

Slang expressions are “Terms that are made up or are given new definitions [by a social group] in order to make the terms novel or conventional [such that people outside the social group are excluded from the group’s discussions]” (Harris, 1994). Slang is, therefore, a sociolinguistic phenomenon. This chapter investigates the Igbo slang expressions used by members of Otu-Onitsha speech community. Many scholars have attempted the study of slang use in Igboland (see Anasiudu and Oluikpe, 1983; Oluikpe, Anasiudu and Ogbonna, 1984; Oluikpe and Ogbonna, 1987; Anasiudu, 1987; Okorji, 1998; Ebede, 2001; Oluikpe and Anasiudu, 2006; Nwoye, 2007). Although a few instances of Igbo slang appear in some of these works, none gives a detailed examination of Igbo slang expressions frequently used in an Igbo speech community. It identifies some Igbo slang expressions, their various users and contexts of usage. As Otu-Onitsha speech community comprises Igbo speakers from the different dialect areas of Igboland, we advocate that these slang expressions in use in Otu-Onitsha should consciously be made to permeate into the various Igbo communities as it is customary for the speakers in Otu-Onitsha to visit their family homes/villages from time to time. This would, definitely, enrich the Igbo language in their respective communities.

Introduction

Slang is a common sociolinguistic feature found in every speech community. In the past, it was viewed as informal and associated with the less privileged and with persons of a low or disreputable character (cf. Bussman, 1996; Crystal, 1997; Johnson and Shirley, 2005; McGregor, 2009). According to Johnson and Shirley (2005), slang can be described as “informal, non-standard words or phrases (lexical innovations) which tend to originate in subcultures within a society”. For Crystal (1997:53), it is “A colloquial departure from standard usage; it is often imaginative, vivid, and ingenious in its construction – so much so that it has been called the ‘plain man’s poetry’.”

Presently, slang has taken another form. Slang expressions could add new meanings to existing words, thereby, enriching the lexicon of any given language (cf. Jowitt, 1991). Harris (1994) defines slang expressions as “Terms that are made up or are given new definitions [by a social group] in order to make the terms novel or conventional [such that people outside the social group are excluded from the group’s discussions]”. No wonder Winkler (2007:142) says, “Slang often originates in a particular group and then may spread out to parts of the general population…Some slang words even become part and parcel of the common lexicon and may no longer be considered slang…”

Onitsha is located in Anambra State, and it is one of the major commercial cities which attracts the presence of people from various cultures across Nigeria, including Igbo speakers with different dialects. Igbo is the mother-tongue and the dominant language of the people of Anambra State. However, Otu-Onitsha dialect is spoken predominantly by the non-indigenes of Onitsha. The title, Otu-Onitsha, is based on the heterogeneity that is implicit in it. ‘Otu’ is the name of the main Onitsha market which accommodates people from other dialect and areas of Igbo (Ikekeonwu, 1987:186). This particular study is basically on the use of slang by Otu-Onitsha speech community. It should be noted that some of the Igbo slang expressions in use in this speech community are gradually penetrating into Enu-Onitsha speech community. Enu-Onitsha is the abode of the indigenes of Onitsha, and the place accommodates people from different dialect areas.
Methodology
The primary data were collected through tape-recording the speeches of different inhabitants of Otu-Onitsha. The tape-recordings were done in different places, such as the Onitsha main-market, motor parks, garages, mechanic workshops, bars/beer parlours, eateries, canteens, cafeterias, restaurants, shopping places, especially meat-preparing centres. Other pieces of information were collected through one-on-one contact with people. Normally, the informants were not aware of the tape-recordings. This facilitated the reliability of the data collected.

Igbo Slang among Otu-Onitsha speakers
The following are few instances of slang expressions collected from Otu-Onitsha inhabitants. We categorize them as Igbo since we view them as having originated from Igbo words and expressions. We have tried to group the slang expressions according to the context of usage. Within each context, we have explained the users. The contexts we have identified and under which we have grouped the slang expressions are:

a. economic life; for example, trade, commerce, business
b. social evils, like stealing, robbery, promiscuity, duping
c. social talk, for instance, living in affluence, suffering in servitude
d. transportation, for example, using old/new motorcycle, car, bus e. social relations, for instance, issues relating to participating/attendance at ceremonies, sexual encounters, romance, love-making
f. eating and drinking
g. social stratification
h. miscellaneous

In our analysis, two meanings of each expression are presented. The first one is the literal meaning. It is enclosed in inverted commas and begins with a lower case. The second meaning, being the slang begins with an upper case and it is not enclosed in inverted commas. In cases where literal meanings are unobtainable, there are just the slang meanings of the expressions.
A) Economic Life

One of the most viable economic activities at Otu-Onitsha is trade. Traders use slang expressions during business hours. These expressions are used by generality of the traders, i.e. men, women, teenagers who are involved in trading activities. Some of the expressions we recorded are:

mmememe  “feast”  When many customers are in one’s shop buba  “carry something inside”  Make much money rachaa ọkwa  “lick the wooden plate”  Make much profit mgbago  “going up”  Overseas, used by traders who usually travel overseas i bugonu  “you have grown”  You have got much money kpokom  Money igbu ozu  “to kill”  To be rich, to make it big!, successful pịaakaa  “open something by hitting”  Be rich gbutọọ  “kill in pieces”  Become exceedingly rich or wealthy gbachaa arụ  Give a tip to somebody ọnwa ị na-eti  “your moon is shining”  You are wealthy ọ suọ  “it stabs”  Done, (of money) abundance inye iru efị  “to give a cow’s face”  To show contempt for people, especially a seller who shows contempt for a buyer who prices his goods/products very low owu ite  “pot’s thread”  Poverty, lack of money, hardship mbada  Highly expensive ahịịa  “grass”  Indian hemp, weed, marijuana imesi ife ụkwa  “to do things with vigour”  Excessive spending, high spender, flamboyant onye ọkụkụ  “a planter”  Spendthrift chaa ote ţi nọ mma tatu aka kpapụta ya

B) Social Evils
The slang expressions that portray social evils such as robbery, drug addiction, and prostitution, are listed below:
eke ezi dọọ piåkaa tikara onye ọrụ ûmu nnwa kpowaa kwatuo mmađụ ife megharịa bọchaa afịa onye afịa  “a market person” An armed robber i naghị ajo njo “you are generous” A sexually liberal woman chawaa isi Smoke many wraps of Indian hemp, weed, marijuana isi ife “to cook something” To smoke (cigarette or Indian hemp, weed, marijuana)

C) Social Talk
Here we talk about slang expressions that are used casually or in social gatherings. For example:

ň chara acha “it is ripe” Is beautiful ife aka “to wave a hand” To die saa isi “wash the head” Try to convince somebody wụgharịa “jump around” Boast zaa isi “swell the head” Pride, headstrong, stubborn person ike “buttocks” A weak person (usually a man) tọkọ Useless ihe ka nkụ “things are more than firewood” Matters are beyond control ň diịa “it is here” It is inclusive, you belong i nọ n’ofe “you are in soup” You belong to a revered group; you are abreast with recent happenings anyị ma onye i bụ “we know whom you are” We anticipate your spraying money in an occasion onye mmacha A pompous person ka anyị nwee “let us have” Let us meet confidentially ọgbanje na-agba Great things are happening kee ife I loo? “what do you think?” A compliment to someone D) Transportation
Below are the expressions used by mostly motor park operators. They are also used by general. Examples:

eke  “python”  Long vehicle, haulage truck mgbachapụ  (used by bus drivers) Picking passengers along, not waiting to go with a full-loaded bus akpụrụka  An old, poorly maintained vehicle especially buses for public transport akanchawa  “a brightened hand”  The brand of motorcycles that are now in use by commercial motorcyclists ọwa  Vehicles that are in good shape onye ọwa  A driver who drives on a very high speed compliment from people who enjoy high speedy drive/ride ịkpa ọwa  To drive on a very high speed mangala  “dried fish”  A corpse taken from the place of death to the deceased’s hometown

E) Social Relations
The expressions that fall within this sub-heading are basically those pertaining to physical appearance, romance and sexually related issues or love-making themes. They are:

gbado nwaanyị  “toasting, trying to convince or talking to a woman”  Try to gain a lady’s love for friendship only okpu nnabuenyị  “nnabuenyi’s cap”  Condom anyali  “albino”  Used to refer to a pretty and well dressed lady ibu  “load” Expensive items of clothing onye nko  An unfaithful person nnwa  “child” A man’s girlfriend asa  “a kind of fish (catfish)” A man’s girlfriend ô ji ife  “s/he is holding something” He is having a sexual intercourse with a lady ô pîja  dqû “to flog fire” To have sexual intercourse ô ñônyee  A lady/woman that has fat buttocks ô na-abû asô n’aka  “s/he spits saliva in the hand” He spends so much on a woman nwanne ozu  “a corpse’s sibling” A friend ibe okwe  To have sexual intercourse ô gbadago  “s/he has gone down” (of a person) Old age wusa arù “keep the body” Relax

F) Eating and Drinking
Expressions relating to eating and drinking are as follows:
ô chawa anya  To smoke cigarette/Indian hemp, weed, marijuana, and drink alcohol at the same time kwa  “push” Eat (food)

G) Miscellaneous
gwadangwa  Do something hastily gbado anya  “put a stop to the eye” be careful; Continue what you are doing kwechiri  Persist in something nkonuko  Trouble making wusa arù “keep the body” Relax gbakọ n’anya one realizes one’s fault kusuo  Harass jaa  Beat severely igwilo One who remains at a particular place without making an attempt to leave onye ṣwa “a person of the world” An unbeliever; (jokingly) an unserious person legwuo “decay excessively” Remain at a place kuọ ọru “hit a work” Reveal a secret o jue afọ “fills one’s stomach” One is happy nye gi ọsọ “gives somebody a run” Harass somebody daputa “fall out” Come out chikọ “gather” Quarrel na-egoli Enjoy mmaja Threat, harassment ọnwụ ya “his/her death” Being fond of something or somebody gbara ọgwụ gi ọụ “take your drug and drink” Behave yourself onye nko An unfaithful person tọọ “throw” Reach a place ụsụ enwerọ ọụ “a bat has no mouth” One who is being intimidated fichaa “wipe” Move out of a place kpaa Pretend to have forgotten something ụgbọ “oil bean” Problem ka o yie ife “let it look like something” Let something look good or attractive o bego “it has ended” Someone has dead Summary and conclusion
This chapter attempted to present some practical Igbo slang expressions used in Otu-Onitsha speech community. We have shown the different contexts of usages of the slang expressions and their users. In line with the claims of Partridge (1894-1979), cited in Crystal (1997:53), that enrichment of language is one of the basic uses of slang, we are convinced that most of the slang expressions operating in Otu-Onitsha would go a long way in the enrichment of the Igbo language, especially the Standard Igbo. Our investigation reveals that some of these slang expressions in Otu-Onitsha have slipped into Enu-Onitsha where a few of them are now used as ordinary words of the speech community.

Moreover, as we have seen above that some dialectal words, for example, “owu ite” (no money, hardship, poverty) (Ezza dialect) are employed as slang expressions with meaning modifications in Otu-Onitsha, the slang expressions could, conversely, permeate the different Igbo dialects, and with time, lose their status as slang expressions in line with Winkler’s (2007) assertion. Since slang is used to enrich a language, the Igbo slang in Otu-Onitsha will enrich the Igbo language. It is pertinent, at this point, to assert that the expressions that are discussed in this chapter will spread over all other dialect areas of Igbo because people from various Igbo speech communities converge on Otu-Onitsha. They use the slang in their day-to-day activities. When they return to their different dialect areas or community, they will continue the use of Otu-Onitsha Igbo slang, thereby, enriching the Igbo language.

References

