Dear Rwanda Journal Series A readers,

On behalf of the editorial board, I am pleased to have this volume number 2, issue number 2 of Rwanda Journal of Arts and Humanities (RWJAH) out! With contributions from scholars and lecturers in the field of arts and humanities, history and language education, this issue focuses on papers from areas of African literature, History of Africa, History of Rwanda, Children's literature, and language education. Some of the papers derive from recent doctoral studies while others are from current researches carried out by academic staff of the School of Arts and Languages, and the School Social, Political and Administrative Sciences. Whatever may be the area of study and the type of research, these works show a high level of appropriateness to proven theories and techniques. They make a profitable contribution to research which can enable to move forward, open new perspectives and enrich questionings.

I would also like to express our gratitude to authors who chose to publish with us. Additionally, I wish to acknowledge the reviewers' hardwork and timely feedbacks on submitted manuscripts. RWJAH is internationally peer reviewed, uploaded on Africa Journals Online (AJOL) and each article published is assigned a Digital Object Identifier (DOI) tagged with CrossRef.

Last but not least, this is a golden opportunity for the journal to pay tribute to the Swedish International Development Agency (Sida) for the financial support given to scientific research and publication at the University of Rwanda. Merry Christmas and Prosperous New Year 2018!

P. C. Ruterana
