Abstract
Some of the prerequisites for promoting social stability in a country include, adequate security, socio-cultural and economic viability, political freedom, freedom of expression and association etc., On the other hand, a nation that lacks all these qualities is wrecked morally, socially, culturally and above all, most vulnerable to treason. In such instance, and obviously too, the portrayal of false identity, lawlessness, insubordination and the likes infiltrate or bedevil such a nation. This paper critically examined the role music and musicians play in achieving stability in the country.

Introduction
In recent times people are passing through series of difficulties due to the problem of insecurity and social instability. In some parts of the country, people are perishing as a result of hunger, while others are faced with uncertainty of life, threat of wars, religious crises and its consequent Boko-Haram issue, kidnapping, civil unrest, segregation, malnutrition, diseases, abduction and other numerous disheartening situations. This period, in a nutshell, is not different from the pre-colonial and colonial periods when people were sold into slavery, when poverty was seen as a curse and when all sorts of inhuman practices were given a boost by the powers that be, such as the local chiefs, the Obas, the Emirs and other wealthy tyrants of the time. The only difference between those periods and now is the absence of that monstrous appellation –‘slavery’, but ironically, the effect (of slavery) still remains, and if it is allowed to continue, one wonders what the next generation would turn out to be. Therefore in the face of all these vices bedeviling the country which have given rise to its present state of insecurity and instability, musicians and music have a holistic role to play. And this is the focus of the paper.

Concepts of Music and Musician
In this context, it is not out of place to discuss in general terms the concepts of music and musicians as they constitute the major framework of this essay. Many a time, people appreciate music just for what they think it is (–entertainment medium) and musicians for what they think they are (–entertainers). As a result they fail to comprehend the vital role music and musicians play in the proper functioning of events in human existence and thereby accord them little or no serious reputation in society. Music is more than ordinary entertainment phenomenon, according to Umezinwa (128) “to the owners and practitioners, it is a force, a living force that yields to various forms of meanings and interpretations. It is just not one thing but many things reviewed from a prism, which unifies all”. Therefore, from these various forms of meanings and interpretations, one can rightly describe music as, a moral censor, a mobilizer, an educator, promoter of social and cultural values etc. As a moral censor and an educator for example, the following song on marriage issue educates parents on the need to allow their daughters make choice of marriage by themselves and condemns parents having upper hand or contracting marriage that is likely to cause disharmony and instability between the couple.
Marriage folk

Nna mo, ina-eduzim na-eje n’ajo di?- My father, are you forcing me to marry a bad husband?

Nne mo, ina-eduzim na-eje n’ajo di?- My mother, are you forcing me to marry a bad husband?

Onye unu choro , a choghim ya - The person you desire, I don’t want him

Onye ahu unu na- choghi yanwa bu obi mo- The one you do not want is my choice

Anyi g’ebi n’udo- We shall live in peace

Anyi g’ebi n’ihunanya- We shall live in love

Chineke nyere anyi aka- God help us

Chineke gozienu anyi- God bless us

Olisebr’uwa biko jikota anyi onu- Almighty God please unite together

Ifé anyi cholu bu k’anyi bili n’udo- What we want is to live in peace

Ajo di ajoka Chineke biko – Bad husband is too horrible, God please.

Most parents are responsible for their children’s marital problems due to their selfish ambition, either to cement an already existing relationship or for material gain at the expense of their children’s comfort. The above song is a lesson which if put into consideration during marriage contract, will help reduce crimes and stresses associated with unhealthy union. In the same instance, “A musician is a person who … ‘is involved in the art of’ music making and above all takes it as a career”. (Ibekwe,:35a) Based on this definition, various components of musicians emerge such as a composer, a vocal or instrumental performer, a conductor or director of choral/orchestral music, an arranger, a dancer and so on. Even musicologists who study the rudiments, theory and history of music in both traditional and western forms are also called musicians. (Ibekwe,35) The New International Webster’s Comprehensive Dictionary of the English Language (838) defines a musician as “one skilled in music; especially, a professional performer”. For the purpose of this discussion, Okafor, (6) provides a workable definition of a musician that places him/her above a mere entertainer, thus,

The musician has a role as a keeper of public conscience and as a man who has his hands on the social control lever. He guides the society; drawing, of course, from the collective wisdom and pool of knowledge and proverbs of his people. He foresees events like any poet, for a poet can point the way to come, even though the people following may not see it for the time being.

Musicians achieve all these through their music. Okafor, (7) goes further to say that, “many of our social comments, moral codes and guides are couched in music and songs” by these musicians. Take for instance, a mother who is instructing her child on the tenets of the community finds the product of musicians useful, so that the child grows up a responsible person devoid of social misfit. She renders the following song.

Cradle Song

Kelee onye muru gi  Greet your parents
Kelee onye muru gi  Greet your parents
Kelee onye toro gi  Greet your elder
Nne gi gwa gi nuru  Hear (obey) the instructions of your mother
Nna gi gwa gi nuru  Hear the instructions of your father
Before heeding to those of another’s
And persevere to respect your elders
(Adapted from Okafor, 2005:55)

If the child obeys the mother’s instruction, he/she will become a responsible person in future and would not bring stress to his/her parents and the society at large. Music (especially African) by its nature and purpose is a compendium of people’s way of life. In other words, it represents people’s tradition and no amount of stereotype conception can undermine its importance in any society. According to Ibekwe, (36) musicians have designated duties which are embroiled in the power of their music to entertain, educate, socialize, symbolize, mobilize, motivate, sanitize, soothe, heal, exorcize, criticize and acculturate…Africans attach great values to cultural demeanors such as expressive power of song texts, symbolic and aesthetic disposition of costumes and endearing messages of body movements… (that) make culture statements any time music ‘is performing. (Therefore), a musician is expected to follow or observe the standard laid down within the culture he is operating.

Obviously, the amount of recognition a musician receives in any society depends significantly on the effectiveness of his music in conveying the required message, which is based on the communities’ understanding of the concept. Nzewi, (102) opinionates that, “the misunderstanding of ...(the) nature and logic (of African music) has given rise to a lot of misinformed and speculative theories about African’s musical intellection”, for that reason, musicians should take into consideration the people’s expectations of them and avoid misrepresentations.

The Concept of Insecurity / Social Instability;

Insecurity according to The New International Webster’s Comprehensive Dictionary of the English Language,(655) implies “the condition of being unsafe; liability to injury, loss or failure; uncertainty; instability”... From the above definition, insecurity appears to be synonymous with instability. On the other hand, social security from the same source means “any public system which provides welfare services for members of the community in need.(for instance)... A Federal program of old-age and unemployment insurance, public assistance to the blind, disabled, and dependent, and maternal and child welfare services administered by the social security administration” (1192). Given the above submission, one can then establish that social stability implies the provision of social services for the welfare of the citizenry, and that social instability obviously implies lack of social services which make people’s lives unbearable, unsafe, and unstable. Therefore, being exposed to the consequences of insecurity and or social instability, it becomes clear what would be the situation of a country besieged with such vices. Musicians such as Celestine Ukwu of the blessed memory pictured this situation of instability and uncertainty through the following song, and revealed that no matter ones position in life one is still confronted by uncertainty of life. This is an advice for people to do things with moderation because no one knows tomorrow.

TOMORROW IS UNCERTAIN
Trust no future however pleasant it may seem Trust no future however pleasant it may be
For what tomorrow has in store is so uncertain
Ride on with whatever you have in life
For like Peter never go
Some pride (themselves) with what they have in mind
Some think that without them (there’s) nothing like this world
But the big question is;
Who had ever died and the world came to a standstill?

In this our funny world
There is so great rat-race to grab the world riches
Yet no one feels satisfied with whatever he or she has in life
Many are trampled
Many fall by the way side

But, hei! Stop and think
That when you are dead the world continues
The world continues without you
No matter your pride or position …

In a similar development, he encouraged people never to be despaired or discouraged no matter how bad the situation is.
This is captured in his song titled, OKWUKWE NA NCHEKWUBE (Faith and Hope)
Ife nwelu mbido ga enwelili njedebe
Whatever has a beginning must have an end

O na-abu ife na-eme o dika o ma ebezi
When a thing happens it seems it will never come to an end

Ife melu anyi, k’anyi lunyelu Olisa
When we are in good times, let us pay tribute to God
Ife mee anyi, k’anyi chekwube Olisa
When we are in hard times, let us hope in God
K’anyi ghalu nkolopu
Let us not despair

K’anyi welu okwukwe na nchekwube, ghalu nkolopu
Let us have faith and hope and forego despair

Welu okwukwe na nchekwbe
Have faith and hope

O na-abu ife na-eme ufodu e ekolopu
When some conditions prevail some people despair

O na-abu ife dado ndi ufodu fa e ekolopu
When temptations come some people despair

Anyi adi elota n’ife obuna nwelu mbido ga enwelili njedebe
We do not remember that whatever has a beginning must have an end

Ife obuna a dado n’anyi k’anyi welu okwukwe na nchekwube
Whatever befalls us, let us have faith and hope

Okwukwe na nchekwube ga azo anyi
Faith and hope will save us

Maka n’ife obuna e enwena mbido ga enwelili njedebe
Because whatever has a beginning must have an end (Okafor et al, 1999; 12)
With the above instructions, one is therefore well informed on the challenges of life, and is also encouraged with the hope that one day or some time things may change or become better.

The Role of Music and Musicians in the Promotion of Social Stability

Good music promotes social stability, patriotism and gives good image to a nation. Many musicians and even individuals are concerned about making the country a better place. The issue and timely nature of the “rebranding process” initiated or launched on February 9, 2009 by the former Minister of Information and Culture, Professor Dora Akunyili, with the slogan, “Nigeria: Good People, Great Nation”, is an attempt to create a better image for the country. This clarion call had earlier been given a boost by such musician as Nelly Uchendu in her songs,

(1) BE A TRUE NIGERIAN

Be a true Nigerian today
If we love our Country
We will make a greater progress
All those things we talk about
Will one day be forgotten
Only you can make a great Nigeria
Come let us make a great Nigeria
Sacrifice to build a great Nigeria (Nelly Uchendu, 1986)

(2) MAKE A NEW NIGERIA

Be a true Nigerian, do everything right
Always be patriotic
You will see you too can make Nigeria great
Don’t be avaricious, don’t ever mislead
We must contribute now for the growth of our country
With good sanitation and excellent behavior
Let us be proud now to make Nigeria great  (Nelly Uchendu, 1986)  (in Okafor, 2005;11-12)
These songs are calls for the people of Nigeria to be good people, be law abiding, and do what is right so that the country will be a better place for her citizenry. A musician is regarded as a ‘watch-dog’ to the happenings in his society. “A watch-dog refers to one that guard against loss, waste, theft or undesirable practices”. (Oguno, 157a) Music offers a perfect medium through which messages are communicated; even a message that is considered implicating, dangerous, hurting or abusive is conveyed through music without minding the consequences and provided it is aimed at bettering the condition of the oppressed. An example is captured in the song of Dan Maraya of Jos, rendered in Hausa Language. BABBAN MUTUM (HAUSA)

Mai Arzik,
Kana taka Mota Mai-isada
Ga ta da Na-u’ ran Sanyi
Ga ta muma da Rediyo
Kana ganin Talaka shi ba komai bane
Kana tsammanin shi ba kowa bane
Ammma ka tuna fa
Ida Motar taka, ta kafe chikin lata
Shi dai wanna ta-lakan zaka
Nemo ya fitceta

Great man
You ride an expensive car
It is air-conditioned
It has radio
You despise the poor man
You think he is nothing
But remember this
When your car stuck in the mud
You will look for the poor man to push it out
Mai Dukiyan

Kana zaune chikin Babban Gidan ka
You live in your big house

Ga ta da Na-u’ ran Sanyi
It is air-conditioned

Ga manyan kujeru
You have big beds

Ga babban Madafi
You have a big kitchen

Ga Kuma Babban Zaure
You have a big parlour

Kana ganin Talaka shi ba komai bane
You despise the poor man

Baka taimakon sad a komai
You will give him nothing

Ammma ka tuna fa
But remember this

Shi dai Wannan Talakan
It is the poor man

Da ba shi da komi
The lowly man of no means

Shi ya dauki kasan
Who carried the sand

Da Ruwan
And carried the water

Da kuma sauran kayan
And carried the loads

Da aka gina Gidan kan da shi
For the building of your house

(Dan Maraya Jos in Okafor 2005; 365-366)

Musicians utilize music medium in no small measure to send messages across. According to Okafor, (10) a musician “shares a role of keeping a watchful eye on the goings-on in the society. He is therefore, a social critic and guides his people according to the prevailing norms. He foresees and he reflects. He has his hands on the social control lever”. What it implies is that musicians are the society’s spokes-men, the defender of the defenseless and pointers to social order. In Veno Marioghae’s appeal for a positive change, she sent messages across in one of her Hits - NIGERIA GO SURVIVE If they tief our oil-o

Even if they burn de oil-o
I say if they drain de oil-o

(in Okafor, 2005:370)

Music provides avenues for correcting social disorder either by criticizing the constituted authority or a political power. Okafor, (10) clearly observes that, we have some musicians who got into trouble not only by attacking even the military but also by not respecting a political party in power which does not have a vision of the society as it should or shall be… whereas the musician may not sit at the seat of power, he has a say in what happens there. He has a say in what type of image those at the seat of power should project’.

Even at community levels, musicians are not always tolerated because of their out-spoken nature. Generally, music constitutes nuisance to deviants and law breakers even when directly or indirectly applied. Nevertheless, all these affirmations do not imply that musicians do not err, many musicians are sycophants, but that is not within the scope of this work. The type of music this paper is concerned with includes those that are culturally accepted or approved and those that promote social stability. Those of them that have little or no message at all to give are also not within the scope of this discourse no matter which of the groups that are involved.

Another important role music and musicians perform to address issue of social instability is the provision of jobs. The country is flooded with healthy men, women and youths who are jobless. Oguno, (301b ) decries that, talking of unemployment in a country like Nigeria where natural resources abound, looks ridiculous. He describes a situation where “excess oil accrue… gas is being flared, coal deposit abound, precious stones like granite abound in commercial quantity, palm plantation that was a major source of government income in years preceding independence have virtually been abandoned…Industries are not created and idle youths roam about the streets creating insecurity everywhere” as unfortunate. The greater percentage of crimes that ravage this country comes from these idle and restive citizens who would have been more productive if they were adequately engaged. In this direction, music and musicians have provided a very big relief and succor to many who engage themselves in one aspect of music business or the other for their livelihood. Many young boys and girls have become amateur musicians just to make both ends meet; some are involved in the sale of musical works. Even many of the school leavers have taken to dancing as market or business promoters instead of staying idle and causing trouble in society.

Conclusion:
Nigeria is a nation beset with a lot of problems which social instability/insecurity is part of. These problems can only be eradicated if people are ready to shun self aggrandizement, and all the principle actors in the nation’s struggle for better Nigeria project give a befitting image for the country. Musicians should point the way forward, and should not be busy fattening their pockets through praise singing, or presenting music that is counter-productive, a music that portrays the country in a negative image, instead they should use good music or jingles to enlighten the masses and even help the government to curb insecurity through songs and jingles that condemn deviant behaviours such as drug trafficking, fraud, and other related crimes and hence promote stability.
